

The health and protection of a child depends on the participation of the father and the health of the mother.

In an innovative approach, ARH seeks to involve men in actively confronting issues of reproductive and maternal health in rural Uganda.

Founded in 2010, Action for Reproductive Health (ARH) is a new Uganda-based non-profit organisation dedicated to the improvement of reproductive and maternal health in rural Uganda. Taking an innovative approach, ARH seeks to actively involve men in addressing these critical issues.

ARH is committed to the following aims to achieve its important mission:

- To contribute to the improvement of maternal and reproductive health in rural Uganda by involving men in health care decisions.
- To strengthen the institutional and human resource capacities of key actors including local governments, health centers, communities, and men and women involved in reproductive health, focussed on improving reproductive and maternal health.
